Missions Update - Penny Warner

Bible Translator and Writer in Kédougou, Africa

Dear Prayer Partners,

April 2022

Greetings from Kédougou. It is slowly becoming home. I have had more of an adjustment to living here than I expected. Two of the biggest challenges have been to find time to go visiting and to go to the market. I am learning that some days I simply have to take time to do one or the other. I have met new folks. Except for Mammadu and his family I either have to drive my truck or walk about 30 minutes to visit folks. Thankfully, Mammadu is only a few minutes away.

In January, Tuuta, Mammadu, and I all had some form of covid. Tuuta recovered quickly but Mammadu and I longer. For me the worst part was it seemed to increase my insomnia that I was already battling. Now that is settling down and I am sleeping better. Pray for good health and sleep. We are headed into our hot season.

In spite of the challenges, we have made good progress. All the epistles have had their comprehension checks. We finished 2 Corinthians and were working on the third one when our language helper actually fell asleep. I said, "It is time to quit." Our helper is sharp, but not when asleep! I have a few epistles back and translated for the consultant, but there are a couple of checks to be done before they can be sent to him.

Mammadu and I have gone over the first 11 chapters of Matthew. They are taped, adjusted and ready for comprehension checking. It will take a while to check 28 chapters three times! Lord-willing I will be able to draft the remaining chapters. We are in a routine which feels like it mostly consists of translation, translation, and more translation! The New Testament will be completed this year, not all consultant checked, but ready for it.

At the end of February, I did take time to attend a short women's retreat which gave me some fellowship and encouragement. Then, my resident visa was ready, so I went to Dakar and picked it up. A friend from Dakar came to visit. It was a huge blessing. Tuuta is helping with the cleaning, another blessing! I have been reading some good books. A theme seems to be choosing joy. May you rejoice in the Lord and pray that I will also!
